What do we want from our Rose Society

Recently, a couple of people have told me that they feel the MEVRS is hurting. And, members don't want to participate.

I have a difficult time with this, because I just don't believe it is true. There may be fewer of us which is a sign of the times, but, I believe members still feel strongly about our organization and we all want Arizona's oldest Rose Society to stay successful.

We have a bright new slate of officers who are willing to help us move ahead by bringing fresh ideas to programs. But it doesn't end there.

I would like to charge YOU (each of our precious members) to "chime in". Help us by bringing ideas to the table that will refresh each other for programs, as well as activities in which we might engage to get our chimes ringing:

Visit ONE fellow member's garden a month. Have a cup of tea. (We'll provide a list willing participants.) Come to the monthly meeting to report ONE thing you saw or learned.

MEVRS Volunteer Day—The Rose Garden at MCC. Wear a silly-outrageous hat.

Design a rose-related game for CHILDREN at our garden...a scavenger hunt maybe. This to encourage parents to bring their kids.

Visit the gardens at Charlotte Hall in Prescott in June to see the heritage roses.

These are some ideas off the top of my head---let's hear from you.

ROSE CARE CORNER for November, 2015

by Phyllis Henslin, Master Consulting Rosarian

November has arrived, our summer heat has left and our roses are recovering from the stress of summer. The mild days and cool evenings allow the blooms to mature more slowly and our roses are rewarding us with big beautiful blooms. The Pacific Southwest District Convention is being held on Saturday November 21st in the Navajo Room at MCC. This is a wonderful opportunity for you to bring several of your best blooms and enter them in the Rose Show or maybe you have a photo of one of your roses you would like to enter in our Photography Show. However, in order to exhibit your roses or photos you must be registered for the convention. The public can view the roses from 1pm to 4pm free of charge and this is a perfect time to see different varieties of roses that grow well in the Desert Southwest.

Fertilizing: Continue to fertilize heavily until mid November and finish with a ½ rate application the first part of December. Your winter pruning will start in January so you do not want to push a lot of new growth in Dec. You can use a water-soluble fertilizer such as Magnum Grow or Miracle Gro or a granular product such as Arizona's Best Citrus Food or Arizona's All Purpose Fertilizer. During Oct. and Nov. fish emulsion can be used also at the rate of one Tablespoon per gallon of water to help improve the size and color of the blooms. Apply one gallon of this mixture to large bushes in the ground and ½ gallon to miniatures. Remember: Water before and after you fertilize.

Watering: As temperatures drop below 90 degrees you can adjust your watering schedule accordingly.

Spraying: With the return of cool nights and warm days, you may see powdery mildew appearing on your roses. Use a fungicide to prevent powdery mildew. Thrips will also invade the buds on your roses and cause brown edge damage to the petals. Spraying only the buds as soon as they are pea sized will help keep the thrips under control and help avoid killing the beneficial insects you have in your garden. For small gardens you can purchase premixed Bayer Advanced Rose & Flower Insect Killer. For large gardens you can purchase Captain Jack Dead Bug concentrate and mix according to directions. When mixing a concentrate, add 1 teaspoon of Spreader Sticker to your water first and then add your product. The spreader sticker helps with the retention and distribution of the product.

New Roses for your garden: November, December and January are excellent months to plant new roses in those empty spots. Planting early gives the rose's time to get their roots well established before the heat returns. If you are looking for bare root roses, Berridge Nursery in Scottsdale has a large selection starting around the middle of December. Preferably do not buy bare root roses that are pre wrapped and coated in wax. Generally they do not have a strong set of roots as the grower has cut a good share of the roots off to fit in the package.

Thought for the month: Buying cheap roses to save money is like stopping the clock to save time.

Rainbow Sorbet - a Floribunda rose

Starting From Scratch

By Mary Van Vlack

Introduction: After 32 great years, my husband, David, and I decided to sell our home in Arcadia and move to something smaller. Our former home was 4300 square feet with a 25,000 square foot yard intensively landscaped and at one time almost 200 rose bushes, while our new place is 30% smaller with an 8000 square foot yard and no roses at all, hence my title, "Starting From Scratch." Previously I wrote about our past rose gardens, our big move, and the garden we are creating for our new place.

Part 7: How Is Your Garden Growing?

April has arrived with the spring rose shows and I promised an update on our new rose garden. With the early warm weather, our roses have progressed quickly and most plants have already bloomed or at least have some buds. There is a little bad news in the garden, but mostly it's been good news and great news.

Let's get the bad news out of the way. By this I'm not referring to the arrival of aphids and thrips or the mildew that is beginning to subside. These are normal things that we go through every year and the mildew has mostly been confined to a few magnets among my miniatures in containers that we moved from the old house. One of the new roses is not making it, not quite dead yet, but in terrible shape. It is the little Bolero rose from Star-Meilland that I got bare root from Regan Nursery in California. It was starting to leaf out when it arrived, so the whole experience may have been too much of a shock for it. I haven't had the heart to shovel-prune it – yet.

Still, my cup is mostly full since the rest of the forty roses we planted this past winter are doing really well and some of the floribundas are going crazy. Ketchup & Mustard and Doris Day in the back yard and Ebb Tide in front have been blooming beautifully, although a little too early for the Glendale Rose Show. The hybrid teas on R. fortuniana rootstock have almost finished shedding the leaves they wore when they were shipped and most have already made one or two blooms or have some big buds. Randy Scott, which suffered from black spot, has put out new, clean foliage and is catching up with the others. Our hot, dry weather is the best cure and prevention for black spot, but I did spray a fungicide three times so the plant could get some new foliage growing more quickly. The Squire, a David Austin rose that we ordered from K&M, is equal to or ahead of the plants I ordered from David Austin US and has made two big, beautiful blooms. Two of the Austins have surprised me; Darcey Bussell and Munstead Wood, which I thought would be nearly red (listed on HelpMeFind as red blend and dark red), are about the same color as Sophy's Rose, a dark pink. Maybe in the fall they will be darker.

One of the plants I really wanted had proved hard to find, Francis Dubreuil. It is a tea rose, an old garden rose that came on the market in 1894, a small, compact plant that produces very full, deep red, very fragrant blooms, in flushes. I grew it in the old garden and won several awards with it and thought it would be perfect in my small new garden.

Several nurseries listed it on their web sites but told me it was not in stock. Heirloom Nursery in Oregon told me they had lots and lots of them too small to ship. Finally, in late March they were ready to ship, so I ordered two of them. They arrived in their little band containers and are quite small, so I quickly transplanted them into 5-gallon pots. I think I'll take them to our cabin in the mountains for the summer and bring them back to plant in the ground next fall.

David thinks I've planted the bushes too far apart, too sparsely, but he does not realize how much they will fill out in the months ahead. On the other hand, he is coming up with ideas for space for more plants to do next year, so I'm listening.

This year I won't have many blooms for the spring rose shows, but will try to bring what I have. There won't be any "Queens" because there aren't any long stems, but there might be some other ways to show what I do have. As each plant blooms I have taken pictures, so I should have a few photos at least. I'll see you there!

Thank you Mary for the wonderful series on planting your new rose garden. We appreciate all the good information. Looking forward to seeing how your garden continues to grow.

American Rose Society Membership

So, why should a person consider joining the ARS? What's the advantage for the money?

For me the “most tasty” advantage is free/discounted admission to more than 230 gardens and arboreta across the USA. This comes in handy when you visit our local Desert Botanical Garden and others nearby. If you take a car trip, you might drive near a wonderful public garden in any of the 50 states.

Other values with the ARS card:

- 1. The amazing full-color American Rose Magazine.
- 2. The exclusive annual Handbook for Selecting Roses.
- 3. Free access to the Modern Roses 12 with the latest rose registrations.
- 4. Free bulletins to read, download and print to keep you abreast of exhibiting and special info about any kind of rose.
- 5. Discounts to member benefit partners—up to 30%.

Just saying.....think about it.

What Cold Medicines Should I Take?

I don't know about you, but I feel like I have a perpetual runny nose throughout the cold and flu season. I'm pretty sure my family is keeping the facial tissue industry in business.

But with every cold of the season comes the question – what should I take for it? There are medicines that mask the symptoms, medicines that might make them seem worse but drain your sinuses, medicines to help you get a good night's sleep, etc.

I turned to an Ask the Expert column by Banner pharmacist Candyce Collins, PharmD, BCACP, CACP, to wade through the tide of medication options. She notes we will find the following in the cold/flu aisle at the store:

- Antihistamines (e.g. chlorpheniramine, diphenhydramine, loratidine) are used for a runny nose, sneezing, and watery eyes often caused by a cold or allergies.
- Cough suppressants (e.g. dextromethorphan) can be effective in alleviating a hacking, non-productive cough.
- Expectorants (e.g. guaifenesin) help loosen and bring up mucus and other material from the lungs.
- Pain relievers/fever reducers (e.g. acetaminophen, aspirin, ibuprofen) are often found in cold and flu medications to ease body aches and pains, and reduce elevated body temperature.
- Nasal decongestants (e.g. oxymetazoline spray, phenylephrine, pseudoephedrine) alleviate a stuffy nose, as well as sinus congestion and pressure.
- Lozenges containing topical/oral anesthetics (menthol) can relieve throat pain or relieve dryness.

Several medicines combine some of the above treatments in one dose, but that might not always be the best option. You can also take medicines that will treat your symptoms individually. For example, my husband often takes an expectorant when he has a cold, but I find those tend to make my cough worse. I usually take an antihistamine to stop a post nasal drip. Collins notes in her Ask the Expert column that some multi-symptom medications can interact with other medications you are taking.

“To avoid potential problems with multi-ingredient products, select individual medications based on the cold/flu symptoms you typically experience, and that won't negatively impact any medical conditions you may have,” Collins said.

She adds that there is no guarantee that medications will eliminate your symptoms, and recommends consulting your physician if your symptoms worsen— Julie Maurer
